

Click, Click, Click

written by Candice Handy

published by the Educational Theatre Association - 2022

This monologue is copyrighted and remains the intellectual property of the author, used by permission under an agreement with the Educational Theatre Association for educational use exclusively by students of color. Any use by non-BIPOC students is a violation of copyright.

I want to work with a different group because no one is listening to my ideas. I have great ideas. My momma is a manager okay, so I'm smart. I know how to delegate tasks, but no one will listen to me. I keep trying to tell the group that the best way to present is using a trifold, but they all are being lazy and want to use power point. See, a power point doesn't give us the interaction we need, it's just click click click. That's what's wrong with the world, no one wants to connect and interact they just wanna click click click away and swipe. My momma always says I'm an old soul. I don't know what she means, but I think it has to do with the fact that I don't have an IG account or spend hours on TikTok. Maybe I am different. I think we should use paper and glue and maybe a shoebox to present our project. No one agrees with me. I want to be in Lucy's group. At least they have a director and stage manager. Everybody is good at different things, ya know. I am good at making things 3D and interacting with the audience I want to reach. I know this is just a stupid English project, but I can't sleep at night thinking that we are presenting Holes, without actually cutting any hole into cardboard. The whole point of the book is showing that something is missing; there is a void. We can't show that with a power point presentation. Everything is not meant to be technological. Please move me to Lucy's group. They are doing a Wrinkle in Time and maybe they will be more open minded to something different. I don't want to click click click, I want to build something.

The Educational Theatre Association was awarded an ARI Community Arts Projects grant by the Ohio Arts Council to complete this work in the spring of 2022, under a project known as "Finding Voice".

