- I can create at least one technical theatre design for a production based on my design concept.
- I can critique my own design and others for improvement in technique and application of the design concept.

Short term targets:

- I can select one category of theatre design: stage management, theatre marketing, costume design, make up design, lighting design, sound design, and scenic design (short film, see "4b Film Production Unit" below).
- I can participate in a "design storm" project to generate ideas for design.
- I can create a design concept for a play. (concept: visual metaphor)
- I can document my design concept. (for ex: images, words, textures, lines, shapes, swatches, descriptions, photos, etc.)
- I can present my design to a production team.
- I can compete in State Design and Technical Theatre Competition.
- I can critique my own design and others for improvement in technique and application of design concept.

Unit Self-Test Questions:

- 1. How does a designer develop a concept for a production?
- 2. In what ways does a designer's ideas apply to the practical production?
- 3. When completing a design where the next step is construction, what elements are required to implement a design to fit the director's vision?

- 1. Teacher questions students about prior knowledge about history of design and "isms".
- 2. Teacher observes student notes about theatre design.
- 3. Student takes notes on design principles.

Summative

- 1. Students create original theatre design.
- 2. Students have supporting documentation of their concept and process of design.
